

OPEN CALL

OPEN CALL

The call is open to Professional Performing Artists: Dancers, Circus Artists and Physical Actors interested in body practices, training and movement technologies

This edition is taking place in the State of Guanajuato, Mexico from April 14th to 25th, 2025.

This year's teaching team consists in:
Anton Lachky (Slovakia), Laja Field (USA),
Alleyne Dance (UK) and Sita Ostheimer (Germany).

ATLAS*labs*

This is a body practices retreat for professional performing artists that aims to approach different teaching perspectives in an experiential and reflexive manner, building information bridges with renown educators from Europe, África, Asia and Latin America, who have developed diverse personal proposals that coherently involve the study and research of different movement techniques in the format of a lab, creating, therefore, an environment of reasoning and knowledge systemization through research and experiencing the contemporary scene worldwide.

These ATLAS / Teaching-Labs format is conceived as an intensive body practices camp, the sessions are planned to be lengthy enough to be able to deepen in each teacher's proposals and particular processes, to then generate a profound experience focused on the study, research and construction of several languages for the personal scenic work. Atlas is a space that fosters a continuous exchange, significant and direct, originating new environments, meeting points of recognition for performing artists.

ATLASscene

This is a platform for staged works built upon research and improvisational processes within the contemporary scene. It showcases works by experienced and well known contemporary creators, while concurrently being a window for novel performing artists.

ATLAS Mexico Festival congregates in one common space the diverse possibilities to live contemporary art from different origins and identities, making it possible to appreciate the cultural diversity around us. The creative profile of the artists that make up this platform ranges from those with a consolidated career that have influenced the work of generations of artists around the world as well as young choreographers and creators that have founded their work on these creative methods and speeches.

This powerful and unbreakable principle of creation and transformation is the fundamental basis of ATLAS México Biennial International Dance Festival, a performing space that witnesses the growing contemporary scene for professional artists all over the world. It is a space for the construction of collaborative networks, mobility and exchange within festivals, meetings and performing platforms of brother countries that constitute new stages for the dance scene, spaces for the cross-border dialogue and its link to contemporary art dynamics worldwide.
